HANNAH BRENCHER is the creator of The World Needs More Love Letters (moreloveletters.com), which has been responsible for over 20,000 letters written by volunteers. Hannah has given a popular TED talk and has been featured in the Wall Street Journal, Glamour, TODAY.com, Oprah.com, HelloGiggles.com, the White House's "Women Working to Do Good," and on CNN World News. She has worked with the U.S. Postal Service and was honored by the Random Acts of Kindness Foundation.

I had signed up for the "More Love Letters" program (look it up, its great) and so I greatly increased the number of letters that I was writing. I wanted to get some cute stationary and found this. What I love about this book is that everything that I need is in this, which makes it easy to keep in my backpack or bag. When you first open the book, there are 40 suggestions to provide you with letter writing inspiration. Then, the station begins. On the front side, there are five different types of designs; on the back sides, there are also give designs. The back designs do not match the front designs. Then, in the back there are sheets of white stickers; you put one on each side of the letter once its folded.I really appreciate the stationary side. There are enough lines to write a solid letter, but you couldn't write a novel. This wouldn't work if you typically write more than one page in a letter. For me, this was the perfect length to write a good message, story and pleasantries.Additionally, when I babysit and they need to write notes, they LOVE this paper. It makes it fun and enjoyable for them so I don't even have to ask twice.Cons:I think there could be more color variation. The main color throughout all the designs is a deep salmon color. I would love some more variety in the color scheme.When folding the letter, the lines aren't as perfectly measured out as they should be. If you fold them exactly, there is some bubbling up. I have to make new lines where I fold them to get it to lay perfectly flat.I also wish there was a pocket for me to keep my stamps in.Overall: I will buy these All-in-One letters again.

There wasn't a great picture of the actual stationary so I have attached one here. Really great for going on vacation because you don't have to worry about having a card and an envelope! It's similar to a postcard in that there's no spot for a return address unless you squeeze it in the corner.

I just bought this to use for valentines (my first as an adult) and I LOVE it. There's nothing love-letter themed about the pages so you can use them as simple notes for any reason. Several different patterns and colors, too! And thick enough that sharpie pen doesn't bleed through. Just one page so not too much pressure to be prolific, and if you have a sweetheart or long distance connection, the prompts on the inner cover are cute.

Beautiful set and perfect for romantic missives. Great way to remind your loved one that they're worth the 10 minutes it takes to write something special!

Yes. Nice, solid paper. Self-contained letter/envelope pages for whatever you need. Hannah Brencher's book "If you find this letter..." is delightful and will inspire you to get this immediately. After all, the world needs more love letters and this makes it super easy to do so whenever you get inspired.If you haven't done so, read her book:

Bought this but I'd rather buy other pretty blank paper to write letters on. Not very creative other than the ideas at the inside of the cover (front and back)

Loved it! So cute and makes writing letters easy and efficient .

Pages aren't perforated enough to tear out cleanly, I was disappointed in the quality. They looked cute online.
