You probably don't get many e-mails or letters from men, but I just wanted to drop a note...your website is GREAT! I am really impressed and love the creative artwork and the design of the site. I enjoy looking at the art, but I must admit, the products and prices are great also. Keep doing what you're doing...you do it well! Paul Cipa Somerset, PA

I received my Gooseberry Patch order that I placed a day or so ago and was totally impressed with your great service and especially how it was packed for shipping. When I opened it, it was like I was receiving a gift rather than an "order." You certainly know how to give superior service and treat your customers with care and generosity.

I just wanted to drop you a note and share a new family tradition. We recently moved into a new home and the day I unpacked my Gooseberry Patch books is the day it truly felt like home. Thanks for all the wonderful recipes, decorating ideas and crafts. Whatever home I happen to be in, really feels like home once it has some Gooseberry Patch touches and goodies to eat. Since receiving this cookbook 2 weeks ago I have made over 10 dishes from it. For me that's nearly a miracle! Most cookbooks I own only offer a few recipes that are appealing to me or sound good enough to put in the effort that's required for it. Fall, Family & Friends is filled to the brim with recipes that don't only sound delicious but are simple and straight forward. I haven't seen an ingredient yet that I couldn't find at any grocery store across the country. That means no trips across town to a speciality super market for some crazy spice or fruit that's only available 3 weeks out of the year. Obviously these aren't culinary masterpieces or gastronomical delicacies but they are what your average suburban woman/man craves during the crisp Fall months (and beyond). It's the food equivalent of a cozy blanket or fuzzy socks, familiar and comforting. Some of my favorites so far are the Hot Bacon Swiss Dip on page 61, Sugary Cinnamon Roll-ups on page 36, Instant Coffee Bars on page 52, Loaded Mashed Potato Casserole on page 92, Autumn Spice Bread on page 118, Chicken Netti on page 155, and Pumpkin Bread Puddin' on page 196. The book is divided into 8 sections: Favorite Fall Sippers, Farm-Fresh Breakfasts, Hay-Day Appetizers, Farmstand-Fresh Sides and Salads, Country Style Soups and Breads, Slowly Simmered Flavors of Fall, A Thankful Heart, Harvest Main Dishes, Autumn Treats. The crafts, decorations, and presentation ideas at the bottom of each page are cute, fun and even helpful. I like the recommendation of coating the edges of a jack-o-lantern with petroleum jelly to keep them looking "fresh" longer. This cookbook really captures the bucolic essence of Autumn. I'm looking forward to some chilly night in late October and curling up with a cup of the Smoked Sausage Potato Soup (page 126) and reading this cookbook again!

love it would buy from vendor again

So many times the emphasis in these types of books is on meals that will appeal to smaller children. So if you're past the age of twelve, your tastebuds will be cringing at all the sugar and bland combinations. This book includes many more recipes for a palate that enjoys spices, less usual combinations of foods--yet still doable and family friendly. Several good brunch ideas--including clever breads and make-aheads. This is a good go-to book for feeding families without making too many demands on the cook or embarrassing adults who are used to more sophisticated fare.

I am an avid collector of Gooseberry Patch books. I love them all. My less than stellar review of this book centers on one basic problem. Repeating recipes! This book has recipes that already appear in other Gooseberry Patch volumes. The different name does not a different recipe make. In fact, one recipe in the book appear in no less than two of their other books. I wish they would develop a better screening process for what recipes go into the books.

What I find most interesting in looking at a new cookbook, is finding new recipes that you know will taste good because they are something close to what you already have in your bag of standards. For instance, on page 57 of this book they have a recipe for 'Oh-So-Cheesy Chili Dip'. I've made something very similar to this, but used a different set of cheeses. Now I'm waiting for another excuse to go try this. I do find in looking at a recipe like this that I will have an irresistible urge to modify it. The chili dip, for instance calls out for some more spices to make it a bit hotter. And it didn't say that you should use chili without beans. Hmmm! Maybe I should try it once with chili with beans. This is a homespun looking cookbook, kind of like what you'd expect from your local church. The recipes have been contributed by people from all over the country. They are printed in a lay-flat binding so it won't flop over in the middle of preparing something. Are the recipes what you'd like, there's no way I can tell without listing each and every one. Let's just say that there's a wide variety of everything from appetizers to desserts. If there's a single thing that I'd say about these recipes is that most of them are very simple, few strange spices, no complex procedures. Good things to do with your kid as a joint project.

I bought this cookbook and was pleasantly surprised with the recipes. There is something for everyone in this cook book, and the recipes are simple and cover many different things. The recipes are definitely Fall/comfort-food themed.

I just love the Gooseberry Cookbooks and have several of them. This one is definitely a winner and I can highly recommend it. It lives up to its' title, as it is filled with great recipes for get-togethers, especially for Fall and comfort food at its' best.

I am a big fan of gooseberry cookbooks and I really enjoyed this one. The recipes are easy to make. I would highly recommend this one to anyone who likes to cook.
