The beauty of Estes Park Colorado is the background for this story. World War III has just started and within minutes the United States of America has lost all of their power, electronics, cars and basically everything else you can think of. The surprise attack using EMP pulses from nuclear bombs has set us back 100 years in seconds. Planes are falling from the sky, the government is made ineffective and then the second and third attacks occur. Chaos reigns nationwide. The local police chief, a Native American Indian and an Air Force pilot, that ejected from his downed jet, work together to help organize the local population of Estes Park and the tourists to gather food and supplies and get into safe shelter. In addition they have a serial killer on the loose that they have to stop. The killer is obviously insane and the murders are horrific. Tracking him down is hard without working cars and enough skilled people for extensive search parties. The protagonists are also trying to save their own families from dying. This is an excellent story and I enjoyed it. Unfortunately the book's premise rings to close to the possible future of the USA. The proliferation of nuclear weapons provides our enemy nations the power to cripple and destroy our way of life. This book is well written and it's action and storyline is intense. I enjoyed the story and I was also terrorized by the reality that such a scenario is quite possible. I have read many of the books written by Nathan Smith and I have enjoyed them all. This book is a change of pace and theme for Nicholas but it is an excellent start to a new series. I rated it at 5 stars. The second book of the series has also been released. It is a great story and continues the action filled story line. What I like is the story is about a nuclear war with North Korea but the people in the story are also trying to survive in a isolated area with a serial killer on the loose. Excellent suspense story!

I can honestly say this book grabbed my attention from the get go! It reminded me of an old movie from 1984 titled "Red Dawn". If you liked this movie you will thoroughly enjoy this book, especially if you prefer the post apocalyptic genre then this is definitely for you. Keep in mind this book is zombie free, it's actually based on an emp attack on U.S. soil. The author did a phenomenal job creating a story that hits so close to home, it's terrifying. Characters are well developed coupled with suspense, action, and a dose of reality. Based in Colorado within a small town you follow several characters as they search for a missing girl and a murderer in the mountains all the while an EMP attack occurs. You will find yourself rooting for the town drunk while learning the importance of perseverance, preparedness, and a possible real struggle for survival if this were to happen. I really enjoyed this book, I did not want it to end so much so I actually prolonged myself from finishing it. As I close my review a word of advice... get a bug out bag and a faraday cage just for safe measure. One can never be overly prepared for the unexpected.

Nick Smith's books are getting better and better. This is his first book (that I know of) that doesn't involve mutant humans of some sort, or space aliens with just a few last survivors. This book takes place during the first few days of an EMP strike on the US. People in the small town of Estes Park don't really know what hit them. They're waiting for the lights to come on, but we all know they never will. At the same time there is a serial killer on the loose in the town. I think in book two, and later books things will start to get much worse for the people of the town, as gangs start to form, and food starts to run out. In this book, the reality of the situation isn't the main story. This is more about the serial killings that just happen to take place during a world crisis. This isn't so real yet, but it will get more real. I'm looking forward to the next book in the series. (And Hell Divers too)

Just when I thought his books couldn't get any better... Trackers is a wonderfully woven tale of seemingly ordinary people fighting their own internal demons when their small world is turned upside down at the same time the big world outside is crippled and on its knees. I enjoyed immersing myself into the characters he's created and anxiously await the next installment of his killer thrill ride!

Trackers is another exceptional read from Nicholas Sansbury Smith. I wasn't sure if I would like this more than his Extinction books, but the characters and suspense made this an even better and way different read. Raven Spears and Nathan Sardetti are two of the most interesting and flawed characters that you root for in their hunt for a serial killer in Estes Park. I really liked how the author tied in multiple storylines. The reader gets to see what's going on in the same town but also the bigger picture country wide. Looking forward to book 2!

As a fan of Nicholas's Extinction Cycle series, I was very much looking forward to this book as a change in plot to something that is entirely within the realm of possibility. As a fan of the EMP genre, I've read a quite a few and Trackers is definitely the king in my opinion. My only complaint is that I have to wait for the next book!!

This might be my favorite book by the author. It starts off with a bang and has a bit of everything. You learn about EMPs. You learn about Native American stories. You learn about tracking. There is action, suspense, love, and death that made the story much more complex and exciting than your average survival novel. I like how the author takes time researching his books and developing real characters that become your friend and enemies. At the rate the author writes these stories it's amazing they continue to get better with each book.

I am an avid reader of all Mr. Smith's works, but this is my first experience with a TEOTWAWKI that doesn't involve aliens, zombies, or non-human monsters. That said, Mr. Smith makes it work! the most disturbing part, though, for me, is that the events in this book could come to pass, which makes this both exhilarating and sobering.
