Kwei-lin Lum is a California artist who communicates in a variety of visual languages. Fascinated with nature as a child, she went on to study biogeography in college. This is her first project for Dover — she spent significant time studying Mexican culture to ensure that each doll was completely authentic.

When I was a child, I loved playing with my paper dolls. Now, I'm over 70 years old and am still enjoying dressing Jose Posada's Skeletons in their bright Mexican costumes. What a wonderful way to enrich learning and appreciation of Mexican art and culture. Through these paper dolls Spanish students can learn about Mexico's traditions of The Day of the Dead. These paper dolls bring to life the celebrations in Posada's State of Guanajuato, Mexico. These figurines remind me of those I saw in the market in San Miguel de Allende. What beauty and what fun one can derive in dressing these unique paper dolls. This book is a wonderful gift for young and old!

Product was not as expected. I wouldn't have thought all outfits needed to be cut; I assumed it would have perforated edges so you could easily change out outfits. I would not recommend. Aside from that, seller was fast, especially for before Christmas.

I love these dolls! The vivid and colorful outfits cover a wide range of Mexican fashions, both historical and more contemporary. Since I am fond of both Día de los Muertos and paper dolls, this was a very exciting find! The beautiful designs went beyond my expectations and I have actually enjoyed sitting and cutting them out.

My favorite holiday, now in paperdolls! Really fun, who could ask for more? I really do not intend to share with my grandkids.

These were purchased for my granddaughter who loves anything associated with the Day of the Dead celebration. The artistry in this item was outstanding. Thanks for great service.

Great book

Good weight for the dolls, nice designs. Looking forward to playing with them in a week or so. Thank you.

I celebrate the Day of the Dead in a big way and this book added to the fun for the children!
