âœMore than just a good read, this board book is the ideal traveling companion for what to expect when heading out the door with little ones.â • â”Pamela Brill, TalkingWalnut.com This colorful board book takes youngsters through the steps of going on errands. Busy fabric collage and strong black lines make vivid images of a mother and two small children. On the first page Mom asks: âœWhat comes before GO?â • The children answer: âœWe knowâ |Get ready! Get set!â • They then âœGet ready, get setâ |Go potty first.â • They get their coats and a snack, and buckle car seats. Their first stop is a grocery store. From the cart the little boy reaches for âœsugar snacksâ • and âœcookie wookies.â • Uh-oh, the answer is no.â • His older sister calms him with deep breaths. â œlf youâ™re sad or mad, take deep breaths. Ready, set? B-r-e-a-t-h-e in and out and in again. Thatâ™s how you calm down.â • She helpfully hands Mom a bag of oranges. The siblings walk to a library and then go home to play. The final spread provides â œâ ^On-the-Goâ™ Tips for Parents & Caregiversâ • such as â œkeep to a scheduleâ • and â œplan for some fun.â • This book would be a useful conversation starter for young families needing to help their children with similar tasks.â "School Library Journal"â

Help make errand time a fun, cooperative time with this friendly board book

I really like this series of books and get a new one every time we enter a problem zone with the kiddo (biting, hitting, etc.). Recently, he started hating getting ready to go out (such as putting his shoes on, getting in the car seat, etc.). This book didn't help with that stuff. It's basically about being in a good mood and acting politely when you are out, which is great. However, I was hoping it would be in line with the other books -- there's a problem, here's a way of dealing with it (deep breathing, etc.). The kids are too good of a mood in this book!

This whole series of books are fantastic. We are foster parents and they are the same ones that our toddlers' therapist uses with them. I love that we can have a set to reinforce what she's teaching them in the way they are familiar with!

This is a good book for getting kids a sense of what needs to be done in order to leave the house - and what happens when they leave the house. Some things I didn't like: the mom talks about using quiet indoor voices as they enter the store, and on the next page, the kids throw a fit over wanting junk food cereal (I didn't like how it was handled - it seemed like it was just showing off what bad behavior is without having any solution/prevention/distraction for the mom or the kids); when the kids get home, one of them leaves his shoes right where everyone has to step to come into the room; they grab their own granola bars as snacks to bring. Yay for the book having a cat.

I love this whole series of books, my toddler really seems to learn from books. He looks at the drawings of children in these books and they become role models. It is easier for me to guide his behavior if I have a clear example of other children behaving in that certain way. This particular book has helped us get out the door a little faster-- and it gives me language to use to encourage him-- like can you be a "super helper" and get your shoes on!

Love this book. My 20 month old copies some of the things in it and asks to read it all the time. It has short phrases/sentences on each page and wonderful illustrations which keeps her short attention span. The general ideas are fabulous and I know this will be a great book/reminder for my daughter for years to come. Highly recommended.

This series of books has been great for my 2 year old; they capture his attention - which is hard to do. They are well written (easy to add-lib personal things you want to touch on), very colorful, good length.

A great book to teach toddlers what they need to do when they are on the go. I bought few books from these series. My daughter loves the pictures and reading the book with me.

I LOVE this book series. My granddaughter loves books and these are always her first 'go to' when she wants to read. Thanks to the author for a very well written series that actually teaches toddlers!
